RATIONALE

There is increasing pressure on organisations, both public and private, to ensure that their business activities comply with statutes, regulations and standards, both local and international. In addition, the regulatory environment has become more and more complex. As a result, organisations have chosen to implement consolidated and harmonised approaches to achieve compliance without overlaps, duplication or wasted resources. The responsibility for compliance lies with top management and to achieve this organisations are increasingly seeking the services of compliance practitioners to advise, support, monitor and control risk-based compliance frameworks. This qualification provides learners with the necessary knowledge, skills and workplace experience to fulfil this role.

The Compliance Institute Southern Africa is the professional body for compliance officers. It has taken responsibility for the development and assessment of this qualification. These measures form part of a package of measures to encourage and promote compliance within the regulatory environment and to promote the professional status, image and credibility of its members.

The profile of learners who can access this qualification is quite varied. It includes learners who are:

One of the core functions of the Compliance Institute Southern Africa is the establishment and maintenance of the Generally Accepted Compliance Practice (GACP) framework. The GACP is benchmarked internationally and its application forms the core of this qualification. This means that organisations making use of the services of qualified practitioners can be assured that such practitioners are aware of and can apply the highest standards in regulatory risk-based compliance. This, naturally, also means that customers, including the general public, can be assured that the organisations they deal with work within the letter and spirit of the regulatory universe.

INTERNATIONAL COMPARABILITY

Until recently compliance officers did not have to hold specific qualifications. However, as the regulatory requirements and controls have become more onerous and legislation has started to specify that companies are required to employ compliance officers, so the need for formal qualifications is growing world-wide.

The design of the Compliance Officer qualification takes into account the specifications contained in the Generally Accepted Compliance Practice framework, which is aligned with international leading practice, specifically in respect of the Australian compliance standard AS3806 and the Bank for International Settlement's publication on Compliance and the Compliance Function in Banks, 2005:

The GACP is made up of:

- Compliance principles
- Compliance standards
- Compliance guidelines.

Research relating to qualifications that are offered in other countries is set out below. The countries chosen for research are:

- Australia: Chosen in view of the progress made in establishing an effective compliance professionalism framework;
- United Kingdom: Chosen in view of the level of maturity of the regulatory or supervisory framework; and
- USA: Chosen in view of the level of maturity of the regulatory or supervisory framework.

No compliance qualifications are offered in other SADC countries.

The Australasian Compliance Institute (ACI) has implemented an accreditation framework that recognises three levels of accreditation:

- Associate: For relatively new professionals;
- Certified Compliance Professional (CCP): For the majority of experienced professionals who will be managing compliance programmes for industry and government;
- CCP Fellow: For exceptionally dedicated and competent professionals who have also contributed to the profession for the benefit of their colleagues and the general community.

The Certified Compliance Professional broadly equates to Compliance Professional. To gain this accreditation candidates need a minimum of 5 year's compliance experience of which at least 2 years must have been in a senior role, and successful completion of either a five and a half day residential course, or a 22 week distance course.

In the United Kingdom various qualifications are offered. Some are industry specific. The qualification that however, comes closest to the South African one is a Diploma in Compliance offered by the International Compliance Association (ICA) in association with the University of Manchester's Business School. This qualification is broadly equivalent to the Compliance Professional level. It contains the following core modules and an examination over a 9- to 12-month period:

- Understanding the Regulatory Environment
- Regulatory Structure
- The Role of the Compliance Officer
- Risk Management
- Designing an Internal Compliance System
- Dealing with Regulatory Issues and Enforcement
- Compliance with Prudential Regulation
- Corporate Governance, Creating a Compliance Culture and the Benefits of Compliance
- Managing the Risk of Money Laundering and Terrorist Financing
- Market Abuse, Insider Dealing and Fraud Prevention

It focuses primarily on the financial service industry and is endorsed by the British Bankers' Association and mapped to the Financial Services Skills Council Standards of Competency for Compliance. A variant of this qualification is also offered to international compliance officers.

Entry requirements are:

- Sound educational background, e.g. degree or professional qualification in an appropriate discipline or;
- Having completed the Foundation Certificate in Compliance Practice or;
- Three years' relevant work experience.

Compliance qualifications in the USA are offered by various institutions or organisations. For example, Compliance LLC offers instructor-led and distance training as well as on-line examinations for a Certified Risk and Compliance Management Professional (CRCMP). This certification is weighted towards financial institutions and covers five parts:

Part A: Compliance with laws and regulations, and risk management

Part B: The frameworks

Part C: Sarbanes Oxley (US-specific legislation)

Part D: Basel II / Basel III (specific to the Banking industry)

Part E: Designing and implementing a risk and compliance programme.

The South African qualification broadly covers the same content as these international programmes without giving weight to legislation specific to a particular industry. The South African qualification focuses on the implementation of a generic framework and practices which underpin compliance functions in any organisation operating in a range of different particular industries.

The South Africa qualification is broadly comparable to the selected international offerings without focusing on industry specifics.

INTEGRATED ASSESSMENT

An external integrated summative assessment, conducted through the relevant QCTO Assessment Quality partner is required for the issuing of this qualification. The external integrated summative assessment will focus on the exit level outcomes and associated assessment criteria.

The external assessment will be conducted through a combination of a written assessment and the evaluation of an assignment completed during the work experience component. The written examination will be concluded at an approved assessment site and marked by registered assessors. The assignment will be evaluated by a panel comprising a member of the professional body and the employer at the employer's premises.

RECOGNITION OF PRIOR LEARNING

RPL for access to the integrated assessment: Accredited providers and approved workplaces must apply the internal assessment criteria specified in the related curriculum document to establish and conform prior learning. Prior learning must be acknowledged by a statement of results.

RPL for entry requirements to access the qualification: Accredited providers and approved workplaces may recognise prior learning against the relevant access requirements.

ARTICULATION AND LEARNING PATHWAYS

There are no occupational or discipline specific feeder qualifications. There are no higher level qualifications.

This is the underlying qualification required for a professional development pathway. Learners who obtain this qualification are eligible to become registered Compliance Practitioners. After obtaining more experience in the field and meeting additional professional development requirements they become eligible to write the Board Exam for Compliance Professionals.

Compliance Practitioners may articulate horizontally or diagonally to the related fields of Risk Management, Internal Audit or other specific assurance functions such as occupational health and safety.

The curriculum title and code is: Compliance Officer: 242207000

RATIONALE

There has long been an expressed need for a training qualification suitable for occupational and technical training at NQF level 4.

Pilot Occupational Qualification Development projects were initiated by the DoL/QCTO and supported by the GTZ in preparation for the new Skills Development landscape that would be introduced by the Quality Council for Trades and Occupations and the Occupational Qualifications Framework. The development of the capacity of Occupational Trainers through this qualification to deliver quality learning was recognised as a national priority by the DoL at the initiation of the QCTO and the OQF.

The typical Occupational Trainer is a qualified technical or occupational expert who is equipped with the ability to deliver training in their specific field of expertise. The main aims of the training programmes linked to this qualification are to:

- Build and maintain the quality of provision of workplace training, given the important role it has to play more broadly within occupational training.
- In doing so raise the status of those who facilitate learning in an industry or trade context.
- Begin a process for the on-going professional development of occupational education and training practitioners.

Society and the economy will benefit through the added training opportunities that are now available for occupational subject matter experts at NQF levels 3 and 4.

PURPOSE

The purpose of this qualification is to prepare a learner to:

Plan, prepare for, coordinate, implement and evaluate learning programmes to achieve occupational trainee competence.

A qualified learner will be able to:

1. Establish the profile, special needs and barriers to learning of learners within the specified requirements of the training programme (NQF Level 4)
2. Prepare, adapt and align learning materials and resources for a training intervention in the workplace (NQF Level 4)
3. Deliver training, evaluate and report on a learning intervention in the workplace (NQF Level 4)
4. Gather evidence and make assessment decisions using given assessment tools(NQF Level 4)

INTERNATIONAL COMPARABILITY

Certification systems for vocational qualifications are not static structures but reflect the complex history of the development of technical vocational education and training (TVET) in each country. They also respond to current economic and technological needs and trends.

While it appears possible to make generalised comparisons on occupational qualifications in several countries or progression routes to qualified occupational trainer status, it is quite a different matter to base the comparison on what is being taught, how the teaching is taking place and how the students are being assessed. Largely, this difficulty is driven by disparities in the transformation taking place in the advanced industrial countries and its consequences on employment and work patterns, technology and production processes, and subsequently training needs.

Nonetheless, it is quite apparent that pioneer nations such as Germany and Australia amongst others, have developed teacher training systems that have become widely accepted benchmarks. On the other hand it is quite erroneous – but possible – to compare these systems to the hereby proposed Occupational Trainer curriculum; mainly because the function of the occupational trainer often does not have any equivalent in qualification regulatory framework of these countries. It is normally a function carried out by a qualified and extensively experienced employee on a voluntary basis or as appointed by the employer. Often, national frameworks only refer to guidelines that govern workplace trainer educational requirements and follow the conventional adult educator routes and not a specialised curriculum in workplace-based and technical education.

When researching the occupational trainer pathway and role, international frameworks point to courses with similar outcomes as the occupational trainer qualification but not necessarily same target group. Furthermore, due to the common distinctions drawn between Initial Vocational Education and Training (IVET), and Continuing Vocational Education and Training (CVET) in dual-systems prevalent in most nations, no generalised training frameworks and qualifications exist for occupational trainers. IVET – as institutionally based practical workplace preparation system – as opposed to CVET, which is work based, has a more pronounced teacher qualification framework and is the ambit of professional teacher training institutions. On the contrary, occupational trainers fall in the CVET category which has a less regulated framework which feeds off the general teacher-training requirements outlined for IVET practitioners. It is against this backdrop that, an international comparison of occupational trainer qualification has to be placed within the general educator-facilitator scope.

It is quite clear that for a long time no formal occupational trainer qualification has existed besides the recent case of the Berufspädagoge; developed in Germany and piloted within Europe as part of the European Qualifications Framework. The certificate follows the generic trainer aptitude which anyone interested in training and education can access as certified by the AEVO. The Workplace Tutor certificate – varying in equivalence based on national contexts – is focused on equipping in-house training staff with skills required to accompany trainees and colleagues successfully in their learning processes. It therefore goes without saying that South Africa is amongst pioneers in the formal occupational trainer qualification environment, with this proposed curriculum.

In the strict sense, this Occupation Trainer curriculum could be seen as aligned to the German/European qualification whilst also comparable to the general VET trainer curriculum elsewhere. It is against this backdrop and the availability of detailed records that the German Workplace Tutor certificate and the Australian Certificate IV in Training and Assessment were chosen for comparison. The Australian Certificate IV Training and Assessment is a generic qualification geared at entry level practitioners in training, training management, facilitation and assessment within the Training and Further Education system in Australia; particularly focused on VET.

Detailed comparison

Entry requirements:

- SA: NQF level 3 or 4 with subject matter expertise
- Germany: Vocational training and 5 years' experience OR Academic certificate and 2years' experience
- Australia: None

Duration:

- SA: 32 weeks, including the work experience components
- Germany: 20 weeks (80 credits)
- Australia: 26.5 credits

Material covered in formal learning

- SA: Similar –more detail in some areas
- GEAPS: Similar
- Australia: Similar

Conclusion

The scope and content of the South African qualification for an Occupational Trainer compares well with international benchmarks. The structure of the qualification is specific to the South African context and the requirements of the Quality Council for Trades and Occupations.

INTEGRATED ASSESSMENT

An external integrated summative assessment, conducted through the relevant QCTO Assessment Quality partner is required for the issuing of this qualification. The external integrated summative assessment will focus on the exit level outcomes and associated assessment criteria.

The external assessment will be conducted through a panel assessment based on a 15 minute presentation, a knowledge questionnaire and a portfolio of evidence.

The assessment will be conducted by an assessment panel that will be appointed for a fixed period by the SABPP, according to a specified composition. The panel will act within their stated terms of reference in accordance with SABPP policies and procedures, in compliance with a signed Code of Conduct. The panels will assess candidates in approved assessment sites as determined by the SABPP.

RECOGNITION OF PRIOR LEARNING

RPL for access to the integrated assessment: Accredited providers and approved workplaces must apply the internal assessment criteria specified in the related curriculum document to establish and conform prior learning. Prior learning must be acknowledged by a statement of results.

RPL for entry requirements to access the qualification: Accredited providers and approved workplaces may recognise prior learning against the relevant access requirements.

ARTICULATION AND LEARNING PATHWAYS

This Occupational Curriculum aims to address a generic core that is relevant to a range of industries and that will promote progression and transferability of learning within the human resources and training sector.

The learner will be able to progress to higher level occupational qualifications such as the QCTO qualifications for Assessment Practitioner and Training and Development Professional that are still under development.

As the Occupational Trainer is a technical or occupational expert, horizontal mobility can be achieved by reverting back to original occupation.

CRITERIA FOR THE ACCREDITATION OF PROVIDERS

Accreditation of providers will be done against the criteria as reflected in the relevant curriculum on the QCTO website.

The curriculum title and code are: National Occupational Qualification: Occupational Trainer, Curriculum Code 242402000

NOTES

In order to qualify for an external assessment, learners must provide proof of completion of all required modules by means of statements of results and work experience.

Foundational learning competence is a pre-requisite for the awarding this qualification.
