MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE SECURITY INDUSTRY REGULATION BILL, 2001

1. INTRODUCTION

- 1.1 The protection of every person's rights to life and security of the person as well as the right not to be deprived of property is fundamental to the well-being and to the social and economic development of every person. It is within this context that the strategic role of the security industry to protect these rights is realised.
- 1.2 The Bill gives effect to the Security Officers Amendment Act, 1997 (Act No. 104 of 1997), which places a duty on the Minister for Safety and Security to draft a new Bill on the regulation of the security industry. Therefore, although a functional legal framework for regulation exists, the general consensus is that the framework is in need of change. These changes are addressed in the various Chapters of the Bill.

2. SUBSTANCE AND ANALYSIS OF BILL

Chapter 1

Chapter 1 contains the definitions and provisions relating to interpretation.

The definitions should be read within the context of the Bill as a whole. However, compared to the current position, it is clear that the Bill seeks to enlarge the scope of regulation significantly in order to cover a wide enough scope in the security industry. It aims, for example, to cover:

- persons (employers, employees, managers, directors) in the security industry;
- business entities (companies, close corporations, partnerships, sole proprietorships, business trusts);
- activities and practices (the rendering of certain types of security services and the manner in which it is done, for example protecting or safeguarding a person or property, giving advice on the protection or safeguarding of a person or property, or on the use of security equipment, providing a reactive or response service in connection with the safeguarding of a person or property, manufacturing, importing, distributing or advertising of monitoring devices, providing security training or instruction to a security service provider, installing, servicing or repairing security equipment, etc.);
- occupations (private investigator, polygraphist and locksmith);
- sectors (contract security or in-house security, guarding sector);
- relationships (employer/employee); and
- objects or equipment used in providing a security service.

A person rendering a security service will henceforth be referred to as a "security service provider". A "security service" is comprehensively defined in the definitions clause.

Provision is also made for the Minister for Safety and Security to include, for the purposes of the Act, a service or activity other than a service or activity covered by the definition of "security service" as a security service. The Minister has similar authority with respect to the inclusion of security equipment. At the same time the Minister may also exclude any service, activity or practice so that it will not be regarded as a security service or the rendering thereof, as well as any equipment so that it will not be regarded as security equipment, or any person or entity so that he, she or it will not be regarded as a security service provider for the purposes of this Act.

Chapter 2

The need for regulation of the security industry is universally accepted by the majority of stakeholders not only within the industry, but also in the public sector. The question then arises as to the appropriate or suitable vehicle for such regulation.

The Bill makes provision for the establishment of a Security Industry Regulatory Authority, replacing the existing Security Officers' Interim Board. Thus, the envisaged Regulatory Authority will henceforth become the vehicle for such regulation.

The objects of the Authority are set out in clause 3 of the Bill, whilst the functions of the Authority are dealt with in clause 4 of the Bill. Regulation is not merely limited to the protection of the public against unscrupulous operators in the industry, but is extended to the protection of State interests, consumers and the occupation of security service provider. The primary objects of the Authority are to provide for the regulation of the security industry and to exercise control over the occupation of security service provider in the national interest, the public interest and the interest of the security industry itself.

It is proposed that a council of persons which is independent of the private security industry govern the Authority. The Minister may issue guidelines and policy directions regarding the performance of the functions of the Authority. The Council will consist of persons appointed by the Minister.

The Council is obliged to appoint a suitably qualified and experienced person as the chief executive officer of the Authority to be known as the director of the Authority, as well as three deputy directors.

The Council is accountable to the Minister for the performance of its functions. Provision is made for ministerial supervision of the Authority under certain circumstances.

Provision is made to ensure that the Authority is able to achieve its objects. These provisions relate to aspects such as the staff of the Authority, the delegation of powers, the funds of the Authority, bookkeeping and financial statements, as well as auditing.

Chapter 3

The registration of persons who fulfil the registration criteria is the cornerstone of effective regulation. One of the main functions of the Authority is to receive and consider applications for registration and renewal of registration as security service provider and to grant registration where such applications comply with the requirements of the Act.

Persons in the permanent employ of the South African Police Service, the Directorate of Special Operations, the National Intelligence Agency, the South African Secret Service, the South African National Defence Force or the Department of Correctional Services are specifically prohibited from registration as a security service provider while so employed.

Further provisions in this Chapter relate to the suspension, withdrawal and lapsing of registration.

Chapter 4

Chapter 4 contains empowering provisions relating to an enforceable code of conduct for security service providers. The code of conduct must contain rules aimed at promoting responsible conduct, trustworthiness, quality service and adherence to other relevant and applicable laws.

Provision is also made for improper conduct proceedings to be instituted by the Authority against a security service provider on account of an allegation of improper conduct.

Any person aggrieved by a decision of the Authority may appeal to an appeal committee. The appeal committee will be independent of the Authority and will be appointed by the Minister. A member of the appeal committee who is not in the full-time service of the State may be paid such remuneration and allowances as the Minister may determine with the concurrence of the Minister of Finance.

Chapter 5

Provisions governing the inspection of a security service provider, of any other person who or which employs a security officer, or of a person whom the director has reason to believe is a security service provider or employs a security officer, forms an important part of the regulatory task of the Regulatory Authority.

This Chapter deals with the appointment of inspectors as well as persons to assist inspectors.

It enables the director to instruct an inspector to carry out an inspection of the affairs, or any part of the affairs:

- of a security service provider;
- of any other person who employs a security officer; or

- of a person who the director has reason to believe is a security service provider or employs a security officer.

Specific provision is made for the powers of inspectors regarding such inspections.

Provision is also made for the powers of inspectors relating to other persons, but only on authority of a warrant, or if such a person has given consent.

Chapter 6

This Chapter contains general provisions regarding aspects such as the making of regulations, the provision of information to the Authority, offences and penalties, delegation of powers by the Minister and transitional measures.

Of particular importance regarding the making of regulations is the empowering provision with respect to the institution and conduct of improper conduct proceedings or any other enquiry in terms of the Act as well as related matters.

Schedule

The Bill contains a Schedule, which lists offences. These offences are relevant for the purpose of considering whether a person may be registered as a security service provider and whether the registration may be suspended or withdrawn.

3. DEPARTMENTS CONSULTED

The Departments represented in and comprising the relevant Inter-Departmental Committee and the representatives of the Departments participating in the functioning of the Departmental Drafting Team were consulted in the drafting of the Bill.

4. FINANCIAL IMPLICATIONS FOR STATE

There are no financial implications for the state since it is intended to introduce a levy to be paid by the members of the security industry. A money bill to this effect is to be introduced shortly.

5. PARLIAMENTARY PROCEDURE

In the opinion of the Department of the South African Police Service and the State Law Advisers the Bill must be dealt with in accordance with the procedure set out in section 75 of the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa, 1996 (Act No. 108 of 1996), since it contains no provision to which the procedure set out in section 74 or 76 of the Constitution applies.
