No. 1468

17 October 2003

INVITATION TO SUBMIT WRITTEN COMMENTS IN TERMS OF SECTION 110 OF THE NATIONAL WATER ACT, 1998 (ACT 36 OF 1998) ON THE PROPOSED RAISING OF FLAG BOSHELLO DAM AND THE ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT ASSESSMENT RELATING THERETO

The Minister of Water Affairs and Forestry intends constructing a government water work as contained in the Schedule hereto.

In terms of section 110(1)(b)(iii) interested parties are invited to submit written comments on the proposed water work and the environmental impact assessment by 19 December 2003. Comments must be submitted to the Director General, Department of Water Affairs and Forestry, Private Bag X313, Pretoria 0001; Fax 012-336 7399 and marked for the attention of Mr OJS van den Berg, Chief Engineer Options Analysis North.

Signed by Acting Manager: Integrated Water Resource Planning on 9 October 2003.

SCHEDULE ON THE PROPOSED RAISING OF FLAG BOSHELLO DAM (A GOVERNMENT WATER WORK) AND SUMMARY OF THE ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT ASSESSMENT.

A. PROPOSED CONSTRUCTION OF THE SCHEME

In response to increasing water demand and managing the risk of shortages, the Minister of Water Affairs and Forestry proposes raising the existing 36m high Flag Boshielo Dam (FBD) by 5m. This is the best practical environmental option to increase the current storage capacity of 100 million m<sup>3</sup> to 188 million m<sup>3</sup> and so increase the current yield of 56 million m<sup>3</sup>/a to 72 million m<sup>3</sup>/a. The need for the raising is demand driven – largely in response to the projected increase in the importance of planned and existing platinum mines in the region. This projected increase, in turn, is in response to the increasing international profile and importance of platinum.

The Flag Boshielo Dam on the Olifants River was completed in 1986 and is situated about 30 km north-east of Marble Hall along the Mokopane – Marble Hall Road in the Limpopo Province. The dam is situated on the Farm Mooiplaats 355 JR and straddles the Mpumalanga and Limpopo Provincial boundary.

By way of background and contextualisation, increasing demands for water supply for domestic, industrial (most notably new mining developments), agricultural and ecological purposes triggered technical and environmental planning investigations with the objective of identifying the most desirable development options. The conclusion was that the water resources of the Olifants River must be developed in a phased manner, with the raising of Flag Boshielo Dam being the first phase. During the second phase a large dam should be constructed, either at Rooipoort on the Olifants River, 80km South East of Polokwane, or 50 km South of Burgersfort at De Hoop on the Steelpoort River. The best option for the second phase will be chosen on the basis of confirmation of future water requirements, an assessment of the impacts of the options and the relative costs of the transmission infrastructure to the demand centers.

Raising the Flag Boshielo Dam will, inter alia, achieve the following objectives:

- provide water to several new & planned platinum mines in the region served by the dam - mainly in the southern part of the Limpopo Province. The new mining developments are currently using 13 million m<sup>3</sup>/a of water temporarily reallocated from resource poor farmers. As such, this reallocated water must be returned to said users, putting them back into production. It is projected that the new mines will require additional water by October 2005
- ensure that sustainable water supply is available for domestic programmes
- provide for the environmental river requirements, which currently cannot be met by the present configuration and operation of the dam
- revitalise discontinued irrigation for resource poor farmers.

It is proposed that the raising of Flag Boshielo Dam commence early in 2004, with completion by the end of 2005.

B. SUMMARY OF ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT ASSESSMENT (EIA)

The EIA (Scoping Report) examines the proposed project in relation to the prevailing biophysical and socio-economic environment of the region. The potential negative impacts on these environments that may arise during the construction and/or operational phases of the proposed raising of the Flag Boshielo Dam have been highlighted and assessed. No fatal flaws were found. Possible mitigation and management measures to offset potential negative impacts and enhance positive impacts are also proposed and outlined in this report.

A Public Participation Process was undertaken in order to engage Interested & Affected Parties (I&APs) in the Scoping process and to solicit and capture their comments and concerns regarding the proposed project as well as to attempt to answer any questions about the proposal. These have been incorporated in the Scoping Report.

The most significant potential environmental issues anticipated by the proposed raising of the existing FBD are:

- the possible negative impacts on the crocodile population and their breeding sites within the present dam basin, and
- the inundation of landowners' land and infrastructure.

The former is largely obviated by a commitment from DWAF for a reactive monitoring and management programme and the axiomatic assumption that the present integrity of the crocodile population is largely a function of pre-existing anthropogenic changes to the river (the construction of the FBD) and introduced alien fish species. There is some value then in extrapolating this principle and assuming that additional and suitable habitat will, over time, be created for the crocodile population.

The latter socio-economic impact will be addressed comprehensively by the provisions of legislation, including the Expropriation Act.

It is anticipated that some 10 000 new job opportunities in the region will be created by the mining industry. The generation of substantial foreign exchange earnings for the country as well as significant income tax payments are additional positive benefits. The commitment of the mines is indicated by the large investments already made in infrastructure – these would be severely compromised if water requirements were not met by the required delivery date.

In summary, the raising of the Flag Boshielo Dam will enhance the social upliftment and economic development of one of the poorest, but fastest developing regions in the country, and also contribute to sustaining riverine ecological health – this essentially constituting a positive ecological impact. The anticipated negative social and biophysical impacts are of a sufficiently small nature, scale, intensity and duration as to be significantly offset by the positive impacts referred to above.

An Environmental Management Plan (EMP) will be prepared and implemented during the detailed design and construction phase of the project to guide and guarantee the process of impact management.

The Scoping Report was lodged with the Limpopo Province Department of Finance and Economic Development, the Mpumalanga Province Department of Agriculture, Conservation and Environment, and the National Department of Environmental Affairs and Tourism (DEAT), to obtain project authorisation in terms of the Environmental Conservation Act (Act 73 of 1989). The project has been registered with DEAT (reference A24/16/3/419).

MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE COMMUNAL LAND RIGHTS BILL, 2003

1. BACKGROUND

South Africa's inequitable and racially-based system of land tenure causes an unsustainable imbalance in its citizens' access to land, legal recognition afforded to land rights and the consequent levels of security of tenure, and the registration of those rights.

On the one hand, much of the country's land is held by a minority of people under a system affording secure registrable (mainly individual) rights which are legally protected and enforceable. On the other hand, the greater majority of people have only insecure tenure rights (held communally or individually), in less advantaged areas and circumstances. The latter tenure rights (referred to in the Bill as 'old order rights') are often informal and unregistered and have a lower legal and social status, with title to the land vesting paternalistically in the State and the Ingonyama Trust.

The resultant overcrowding on communal land, lack of title to secure ('new order') rights, conflicting claims to land, gender inequities in the ownership and administration of communal land and the chaotic land administration systems occasioned by a plethora of disparate laws and administrative systems, perpetuate the imbalance in the enjoyment of the fundamental human and constitutional rights and prevent social and economic advancement of these areas.

2. OBJECTS OF THE BILL

The objects of the Bill are mandated by section 25(5) and (6) of the Constitution.

The Bill seeks to:

- legally recognise and formalise the African traditional system of communally-held land within the framework provided by the Constitution;
- legally secure land tenure rights of communities and people (including women, the disabled and the youth) within the tenure system of their choice;
- provide for the transfer and registration of communal land and rights in and to that land;
- create a uniform national registration system for all tenure rights whether held individually or communally;
- provide comparable redress where rights cannot be legally secured in situ;
- provide for community rules which are aligned to the Constitution and for their registration;
- provide for a systematic and democratic administration of communal land in which traditional leaders and local and national government actively participate and support communities in the administration of their land and tenure rights; and
- extend the African peoples' access to land.

3. FINANCIAL IMPLICATIONS FOR THE STATE

The implementation of the Bill will require an extensive communication strategy, the provision and training of Departmental staff and the members of the Land Rights Boards, the conducting of land rights enquiries and the resolution of disputes around land and tenure rights, the training of and support to communities and their land administration committees and the provision of logistical requirements (accommodation, equipment, inventory and administration). The estimated annual total cost is R 68 318 299.00.

- Excellence – the Council demands excellence, particularly in the methods employed to conduct research, be it quantitative or qualitative, and hence will consider the track record of the proposer/s for expertise and delivery (quality, time and to budget);
- Use and development of research skills – the Council requires research teams to possess the skills relevant to the success of the project and also favours projects which assist in developing research capacity, particularly in previously disadvantaged groups;
- Collaboration - the Council places a high priority on collaboration between researchers and the “teams of excellence” approach. Thus, the means of soliciting research proposals is intended to stimulate collaboration between centres of excellence and individual experts in order to optimise the use of the Council funding and the research outcomes.

- Development of key indicators – the Council recognises the challenge in assessing performance and improvement in health, as opposed to safety, in the mining industry. There is a lack of suitable occupational health (OH) indicators and baseline data. Thus innovative and robust research to develop relevant OH indicators and baseline values will be favourably considered.

The Council's research and implementation programme consists of occupational health and safety, addresses occupational medicine and hygiene, rock engineering, engineering and machinery, behavioural issues and technology transfer processes.

Each proposal must:

- Address only the research topic advertised and this must be specified;
- Be in the format indicated and the template specified using Word or Rich Text format; and
- Be phased as indicated in the project scope.

- 11.6 SIMRAC shall be entitled to impose, at its discretion, a penalty for late delivery of any part of the project in accordance with the following scale:
3 to 6 months delay: 5 percent; or
6 to 12 months delay: 15 per cent; or more than 12 months delay: 25 per cent

DESCRIPTION OF RISK

Rockfalls

TITLE OF RESEARCH TOPIC

Evaluation of Rock Engineering implementation on South African mines

MOTIVATION

The scope and depth of SIMRAC research in rock engineering is impressive. However, the application of the findings of research is less impressive. Whether it is that the findings are not true, not relevant or not implemented needs to be clarified. A project that evaluates mining in terms of best rock engineering practice and gaps that exist in the knowledge will be useful for setting future research directions and documenting what works best in different mining conditions.

PRIMARY OUTPUT/S OF RESEARCH:

Comprehensive report of rock engineering implementation on mines backed up by measurement and observation.

Rock Engineering input to rock mechanics departments on mines.

Identification of gaps in knowledge for further research

Current practice in rock engineering

POTENTIAL IMPACT OF RESEARCH

The rock engineering knowledge and understanding of the important rock related issues is fairly comprehensive in South Africa. However, statistics suggest that much of the knowledge is not applied. A survey of industry will identify impediments to implementation as well as best practices. The team will be in a position to share best practice with mining personnel during their survey and provide much needed monitoring and measuring know-how. Gaps will emerge in RE knowledge that will help to direct further research

SCOPE OF RESEARCH

Focus areas:

Gold and platinum underground mining sectors

Facebursts and rockfalls

Stopes and tunnels

The research will be conducted in phases as shown:

Phase 1

VCR and Merensky Reef

The following will be considered in assessing implementation:

Reference to and use of SIMRAC and other rock engineering knowledge/practices

Effectiveness of support, including measurements of their performance against stope closures

All incidents of rockfalls and/or rockbursts

All rock related losses associated with the monitoring site

Analysis of the rock engineering aspects of the stope with reference to the geotechnical conditions

Identify gaps in rock engineering knowledge/practices

Identify positive rock engineering practice that benefits safety and production

The mining layout including the influence of leads and lags between mining faces

The impact of human factors on rock engineering aspects

Phase 2*Carbon Leader and UG2

The following will be considered in assessing implementation:

- Reference to and use of SIMRAC and other rock engineering knowledge/practices
- Effectiveness of support, including measurements of their performance against stope closures
- All incidents of rockfalls and/or rockbursts
- All rock related losses associated with the monitoring site
- Analysis of the rock engineering aspects of the stope with reference to the geotechnical conditions
- Identify gaps in rock engineering knowledge/ practices
- Identify positive rock engineering practice that benefits safety and production
- The mining layout including the influence of leads and lags between mining faces
- The impact of human factors on rock engineering aspects

- All incidents of rockfalls and/or rockbursts
- All rock related losses associated with the monitoring site
- Analysis of the rock engineering aspects of the stope with reference to the geotechnical conditions
- Identify gaps in rock engineering knowledge/ practices
- Identify positive rock engineering practice that benefits safety and production
- The mining layout including the influence of leads and lags between mining faces
- The impact of human factors on rock engineering aspects

Phase 4*Tunnels in gold and platinum mines

- All rock related losses associated with the monitoring site
- Analysis of the rock engineering aspects of the tunnel with reference to the geotechnical conditions
- Identify gaps in rock engineering knowledge/practices
- Identify positive rock engineering practice that benefits safety and production
- The mining layout
- The impact of human factors on rock engineering aspects

Duration:

Phase 1	12 months
Phase 2	12 months
Phase 3	12 months
Phase 4	12 months

Potential for application:

The collective rock engineering experience of the mines has been reduced over the past few years. There is a need for experience to be shared widely in the industry. This project would allow greater exposure of researchers to underground production situations while creating opportunities for the mine staff to have access to experts. On the job transfer of technology would occur on the mines where the work is conducted and to the wider mining fraternity through good documentation and communication.

REQUIREMENTS FOR TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER:

- Sufficient time spent with mining personnel on the mines and underground.
- Collection and presentation of excellent measured underground data

Special skills required from project team:

- Rock engineering skills, underground experience, and technology transfer skills.
- Monitoring expertise and experience

SIM 04-02-02*DESCRIPTION OF RISK

Rockfalls

TITLE OF RESEARCH TOPIC

Feasibility study of thermal imaging equipment to identify potential rockfalls

PRIMARY OUTPUT/S OF RESEARCH:

Full documented initial assessment of the use of night vision equipment in identifying rockfalls underground indicating potential of such equipment to identify rockfalls prematurely.

MOTIVATION

Barring accidents and unexpected falls of hangingwall are one of the chief causes of fatalities and injuries in the mining industry. Any tools that will aid in identifying potential rocks that could detach themselves from the rock mass under gravity or shaking would be of benefit to the mines. This technology is untried in the mining industry but has proved itself in other arenas. An initial trial will determine if there is any potential in pursuing the technology further.

POTENTIAL IMPACT OF RESEARCH

Night vision relies on infra-red radiation to obtain images. This technique has been used in warfare with great success. Previous SIMRAC work has demonstrated that it is possible to differentiate loose blocks of rock using a hand-held instrument that measures temperature of the rock remotely. That technology gave spot readings. Night vision gives an integrated image of multiple temperatures. It may be possible using this technique to identify areas of rock instability.

SCOPE OF RESEARCH*Focus areas:

This is a short exploratory project in which the feasibility of night vision concept will be tested.

Phase 1

The gold sector with the greatest potential for rockfalls should be used to test the concept first.

Phase 2

If the technology works in that sector a second phase of the project can investigate the other major mining sectors i.e. coal, platinum and other mines.

The technology should focus on rockfall potential and rock instability, although the technique should also be assessed in highly stressed rock.

Tunnels, slopes and large excavations should be considered for application of the technique.

Duration:

Phase 1        3 months

Phase 2        3months

Potential for application:

If it can be shown that underground personnel are able to identify loose rocks that have the potential to dislodge, this will address a hazard in the industry. If such a system prevented rockfalls through early identification of the hazard then it would be embraced by the industry as a useful technology.

REQUIREMENTS FOR TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER:

If sufficient documented success with such equipment is demonstrated underground then this would open the way to develop a cost effective instrument for the mining industry with its unique conditions and needs. A commercial partner would have to be found to refine and adapt the current equipment to be mine-worthy and to market such equipment into the industry.

Special skills required from project team:

Rock engineering skills, Underground experience, and technology transfer skills.

SIM 04-02-03*DESCRIPTION OF RISK

Rockfalls

TITLE OF RESEARCH TOPIC

New approaches to tabular slope support design.

PRIMARY OUTPUT/S OF RESEARCH:

Inputs into support design for tabular slope faces that considers area coverage.

MOTIVATION

The SDA software developed by CSIR Miningtek with SIMRAC funding has been useful in helping to gain a better understanding regarding support requirements and shortcomings in the face area. In some cases however, any attempt to apply the software for support design has been shown to be inappropriate. A new approach to support design based on engineering principles rather than empirical design for the slope area that will compliment or supercede the SDA approach is deemed necessary.

POTENTIAL IMPACT OF RESEARCH

The high risk at the faces of tabular stopes will be addressed if the support design is based on an engineering basis.

SCOPE OF RESEARCH*Focus areas:

Facebursts and rockfalls

Gold and platinum tabular stopes

All depths

Phase 1

Identify the conditions in which current design approaches do not work

Phase 2

Explore new and existing theoretical approaches to addressing the gaps

Phase 3

Demonstrate the applicability of the new approaches to address design of face support for the majority of geotechnical conditions

Duration:

Phase 1: 2 months

Phase 2: 6 months

Phase 3: 4 months

Potential for application:

Often individual support units work underground but as a system the support is unsuccessful. Also empirical data may not be adequate for the design to occasionally be under-designed and result in major failure. These issues need to be addressed.

REQUIREMENTS FOR TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER:

Computer based program that will allow rock engineers to input data from their mine and arrive at a generic support system design

Special skills required from project team:

Rock engineering skills, Underground experience and modeling skills.

SIM 04-02-04*DESCRIPTION OF RISK

Rockfalls

TITLE OF RESEARCH TOPIC

Evaluation of the performance of shotcrete.

PRIMARY OUTPUT/S OF RESEARCH

Quantification of in situ performance of shotcrete under high stress and dynamic loading.
Determine and calibrate relationships between common laboratory tests (UCS and Energy absorption etc) and the actual performance underground (ie What does a UCS of 40 MPa and an EA of 700J mean underground for a 25mm, 50mm, 100mm etc. thickness of shotcrete under different loading conditions.
Determine the interaction of the shotcrete with the rock mass.

MOTIVATION

Recently there have been a number of major rockbursts in tunnels resulting in several fatalities. Investigations of these incidents resulted in the following question being posed "Do we know and understand what we are design for?" This is especially relevant to the use of shotcrete in high stress tunnels that may be subject to dynamic loading.

Previous SIMRAC work on shotcrete has been carried out and reference to this work should form the basis for further work. Use should be made of the numerous underground shotcrete sites for collection of data rather than setting up special project sites.

POTENTIAL IMPACT OF RESEARCH

Improved understanding and design resulting in improved safety.

SCOPE OF RESEARCH*Focus areas:*Phase 1

Review previous SIMRAC and shotcrete working groups work
Identify gaps

Perform necessary laboratory testing of different shotcrete mixes (UCS, shear tests, energy absorption etc).

Phase 2

Identify mines and mine champions for underground evaluation of different shotcrete mixes and tendons under different loading conditions. TITLE OF RESEARCH TOPIC

Evaluation of the design criteria of closely spaced dip pillars based on their in situ performance

MOTIVATION

The future of deep and ultra deep mining in tabular reefs is dependent on regional support to control seismicity. Many of the deep working have moved to the use of dip pillars in some form as their regional support. The layouts vary in span and dip dimensions from one operation to another. The long-term stability of the layouts has been theoretically appraised during Deepmine projects but the implications of applying these layouts needs to be carried out. Monitoring and measurement of underground sites together with theoretical modeling still needs to be pursued.

TITLE OF RESEARCH TOPIC

The determination of loading conditions for crush pillars and the performance of crush pillars under dynamic loading.

PRIMARY OUTPUT/S OF RESEARCH

Quantification of the transition depth from geological controlled to stress fracturing controlled hangingwall instability / stability.

Performance of crush pillars under static and dynamic conditions at depth in virgin and secondary mining conditions.

Methodology for determining transition from crush pillars to pack / backfill support.

MOTIVATION

Crush pillars are used in shallow and intermediate depth mines to control backbreaks and large geologically defined hangingwall instabilities. A substantial amount of work has been on the design of crush pillars and at what stage (depth and or loading conditions) crush pillars can start being used. There appears to have been no work done to determine the conditions when mines should stop using crush pillars and move onto conventional support such as packs or elongates and backfill.

Crush pillars are used as the major form of support on several gold and platinum down to depths of 1700m below surface. Some of these mines have a possibility of mining down to 2500m below surface. The question that needs to be researched is at what stage does stress induced fracturing start driving hangingwall instability / stability instead of geological structures.

It may be possible to use crush pillars down to a substantial depth, however at this stage we do not know how crush pillars will behave if exposed to dynamic loading from seismic events related to structures or failure of pillars. Possibly, crush pillars may actually damage the hangingwall.

POTENTIAL IMPACT OF RESEARCH

Improved understanding and design resulting in improved safety.

Potential for application:

Requirements for technology transfer:

TITLE OF RESEARCH TOPIC

Quantification of optimum lead / lag distances between adjacent panels in longwall, scattered and sequential grid layouts with respect to seismicity patterns related to abutment shear events.

PRIMARY OUTPUTS OF RESEARCH

Quantification of the effects of various inter-panel lead / lags considering the rockfall and rockburst risks of the various configurations.

Strategies / guidelines to manage the risks associated with different lead / lag situations. This would also apply to support requirements.

Identification of different circumstances to which different lead / lag criteria may be more appropriate.

MOTIVATION

Longwall mines have generally adopted layouts where optimum lead / lags between adjacent panels are deemed to be between 5 and 10m. Guidelines of minimum lead / lags of 40m, where the 5 to 10m "rule" is exceeded, have also been suggested. These guidelines are intuitive, and have not been quantified and are restrictive with respect to production flexibility. Excessive lead / lags can also result in seismicity being generated on the abutment. When exactly this can be expected to occur is unclear and may vary for different types of reefs.

A similar question arises with regard to the lead / lag between adjacent panels in a scattered or sequential grid mining layout.

POTENTIAL IMPACT OF RESEARCH

Improved understanding of lead / lags in terms of their influence on contributing to seismicity, ground conditions and rock mass response to seismic loading.

Understanding of the lead / lags with respect to seismicity being generated on abutments in different geotechnical environments using different layouts. This would mainly be applicable to intermediate to deep gold mines. However, this issue may also have a bearing on shallower platinum mines, which may mine at greater depths in the future.

SCOPE OF RESEARCH*Focus areas:

1. Succinct review of current practices within the gold and platinum mining sectors. Identification of alternative practices that may be appropriate.
2. Review / back analysis of a statistically significant number of rock related incidents where lead / lags were identified as a major contributing factor, to determine conditions at the time of the incident.
3. Review / back analysis of previous rock related incidents (selected) where lead / lags were identified as a major contributing factor to determine conditions at the time of the incident.
4. Evaluation of statistically significant number of lead / lag situations in different environments, this would include:
  - Analysis of occurrence of seismicity and seismicity patterns for large lead /lags.
  - Instrumentation (stress, closure, ground velocities, seismicity)
  - Seismic history analysis and evaluation of rock mass response

- Fracture mapping / quantification of ground conditions over time.
  - Numerical modelling.
  - Analysis of FOG and rockburst incidents.

Project title

Technology transfer of flammable gas hazards reduction techniques in fiery mines

Motivation

The SAMRASS data (1998 to 2001) indicates that flammable gas (methane) accidents account for 7,3% fatalities in the mining industry as a whole. Nearly 97% of these happen in mines other than collieries. SIMRAC completed COL030, COL205 and GAP504, which generated practical ways and techniques to address flammable gas hazards in fiery mines. The information, although available in reports, has not reached a wider audience. There is a need to transfer it to the mines. Hard rock fiery mines should also benefit from some of the techniques discussed in the above research, which was originally aimed at collieries. The aim of this study is to investigate and delineate the content to be transferred and the appropriate mechanism for transfer. Once the transfer mechanism has been agreed upon by SIMRAC, it should be used to disseminate the information.

Primary outputs

Phase 1

1. An appropriately packaged information pack to transfer technology from COL030, COL205, GAP 504, SIM 02 04 01 and SIM 03 04 01 to collieries and hard rock fiery mines
2. A practicable method for the transfer

Phase 2

Practical dissemination of output 1 using output 2.

Scope

Phase 1:

Phase 1 addresses the outcomes and recommendations from COL030, COL205 and GAP504, (and any other SIMRAC research), analyse them critically and repackage them appropriately for each sector, then proposes a practical method for communication the information to the relevant sector. Can mapping, as applied in the collieries, be applicable to hard rock mines? The preferred route should involve direct contact with end users.

Phase 2:

Dependant on phase 1, this phase must carry out the transfer process, using the method agreed upon in phase 1, output 2.

Estimated duration

Phase 1: 6 months

Phase 2: 6 months

Potential impact on significant health and safety risks

Minimize the risk of an underground flammable gas ignition from occurring and effective containment of such an ignition if it is required, or possible, hence saving lives.

Requirement for technology transfer

Entire project is involved with establishing relevant information to transfer, and the appropriate method to do so, as well as the transfer of the product.

Special skills and facilities required by project team

Prevalence of flammable gas pockets in unmined ground ahead of mining operations

Motivation

The SAMRASS data (1998 to 2001) indicates that flammable gas (methane) accidents account for 7,3% fatalities in the mining industry as a whole. One of the causes is the sudden intersection with a gas pocket whose existence was not foreseen. Because of the high pressure (normally associated with the pockets), the gas is liberated into the working environment quicker than it can be cleared by the ventilation regime in use. Such accumulation of gas might result in levels beyond LEL for the mixture, thereby rendering the possibility of an explosion in the area concerned. There is a need to establish the extent and prevalence of such pockets in SA fiery mines so that adequate precautions may be taken to ameliorate this risk. The aim of this study is to investigate the extent of this problem throughout sectors that experience flammable gas, and establish the existence and viability of detection technologies (phase 1). A decision on a way forward will be made based on the findings.

Primary outputs

1. A HIRA based risk assessment document giving guidance on the size and prevalence of gas pockets through out the SA fiery mines
2. An analytical and critical literature survey to determine the existence of technology to detect gas pockets remotely

Scope

The aim is to establish how widespread the problem is, and to guide on the size and significance of the risk the problem causes. A survey based on site interviews and statistics data base interrogation must be made to get a handle on the size and significance of the risk estimated. The study must cover a representative sample of fiery mines in the coal and gold sectors.

A literature review must be carried out to determine the availability of cost effective detection systems to meet this need. Where such technology is in existence, a critical analysis must be made of its applicability in the each of the sectors involved in South Africa. Can such a system be used to detect gas in sealed-off areas? A recommendation to continue to phase 3, or to terminate is expected in this phase. The recommendation should be based on the availability and practicability of the system.

Estimated duration

Duration: 6 months

Potential impact on significant health and safety risks

Minimize the risk of an underground flammable gas ignition from occurring, thereby saving lives.

Requirement for technology transfer

Regional workshops to be done to communicate the outcomes

Special skills and facilities required by project team

- Occupational /environmental engineering with strong experience in flammable gas in hard rock and coal mines
- Electronics expertise essential

2. Recommend, where possible, suitable replacements

Scope

Determine appropriate interventions, prioritising the order of replacement according to the risk pertaining to individual materials.

Protection systems for decline shaft systems

Motivation

So far SIMRAC research has focussed on protection systems for vertical winders, as accident statistics has previously guided in this direction. There have been a couple of accidents lately, where fatalities have resulted from run-away situations (for a variety of reasons), on inclined shaft installations. It is not clear whether or not, there is a generic significant risk in the industry, due to such installations. This study aims to assess the prevalence and significance of them risk, thereafter determine further need for the development of protection systems.

Primary outputs*Phase 1

Document assessing size and significance of the risk

Phase 2

Prototype system for the underwind protection system for Decline winders

Scope*Phase 1:

The study should start off by reviewing the SAMRASS data to determine the extent and size of risk. It should then review the protection systems currently being employed and determine what could be improved, and how? Areas of focus to include protection against run-away cages and protection for people working at shaft bottom. If risk is significant and generic, prototype or best practice protection system should be developed/proposed.

Phase 2:

Contingent upon the result and recommendations from Phase 1.

Estimated duration

Phase1        12 months

Potential impact on significant health and safety risks

Minimise the risk of injury or death to cage occupants, and those within the system in the event of a system failure

Requirement for technology transfer

Product will be launched/demonstrated and workshops will be conducted with end users.

Special skills and facilities required by project team

- Mechanical and Control Engineering experience
- Hands-on experience with winder installations in decline shafts

Brake testing of Trackless Mobile Mining Machinery

Motivation

No definitive procedure and supporting equipment exist in the South African mining industry to evaluate the efficiency of braking systems on TM3 equipment. The requirements, as required by law are vague, and, in not being prescriptive, are open for interpretation. Research into the requirements for adequate braking, as well as the specifying, testing and in-service verification as an input to maintenance is required. Equipment for testing and verifying the effectiveness of retardation needs to be researched, and in the absence of anything suitable, be developed.

Primary outputs*Phase 1

Status document of the current status in the South African mining industry, as well as an investigation into what exists world-wide, and a specification for a brake testing facility.

Phase 2

The development and testing of a brake test device to be adopted throughout industry.

Scope

Phase 1: To establish how widespread the problem and need is, and to guide the size and significance of the risk that the braking system causes. The study is of a theoretical nature, and must cover the full spectrum of trackless vehicles used in mechanised mining, cover all braking systems from all suppliers, and take cognisance of all mining conditions under which these vehicles operate.

Phase 2: This phase must, based on the requirements as identified in phase 1, review all existing means of brake testing, and in the absence of anything found suitable, develop such an apparatus, procedure or otherwise. The findings must be in such a format that it can be adopted throughout industry.

Estimated duration

Phase 1: 6 months

Phase 2: 9 months

Potential impact on significant health and safety risks

Review of illumination systems and occupational medical surveillance in underground mines and a handbook/CD of best practice

Motivation

Previous SIMRAC research has investigated illumination in collieries and gold and platinum mines (Col 541 and GAP 804). Lighting levels required for different tasks and standards have been suggested. Mines have also implemented innovative lighting systems, which have apparently greatly improved safety and productivity. There is however, no overview of the lighting systems in place, what levels of illumination prevail and the best means of enhancing illumination is available. While medical surveillance should include testing of vision, the application of results to the work situation and corrective action for impaired vision, including nutritional intervention, is not documented. Research is therefore necessary to review the current status of illumination and occupational medical surveillance systems to identify best practice/s for enhancement of illumination, working safely and clinical surveillance for different operations.

Primary outputs

1. Report and video on the lighting systems used and the levels of illumination currently prevailing in the S A mining industry underground operations;
2. Report on the occupational medical surveillance systems currently implemented for fulltime and contractor workers in underground operations;
3. Develop a handbook & training CD of best practice for illumination, working safely and medical surveillance in different underground operations.
4. Technology transfer regional workshops.

Scope

The project should include all underground operations. Medical surveillance should include both levels of vision and nutrition, particularly Vitamin A and adaptation to levels of light prevailing in underground mining. The PIMEX system can be used to video tasks and levels of illumination representative of important underground mining activities. This mode of technology transfer can be incorporated into training materials for working safely. The research process and technology transfer should involve all stakeholders, including professional organisations and take cognisance of the current SIMRAC postgraduate optometry project on vision, health and safety.

Ergonomics programme and standards for functional work capacity

Motivation

Previous SIMRAC research and the changing demography in the mining industry have highlighted the need for a comprehensive ergonomics programme to be implemented in the mining industry. The issues of anthropometry, workstation design, gender, functional work capacity, worker fatigue, shift cycles, chronic occupational and other diseases, and nutrition have emerged as some of the important factors affecting the health and safety of miners. SIMRAC research has produced recommendations addressing some of these factors but there is a need to do further research in some areas in order to develop and pilot a comprehensive ergonomic programme for the industry.

Primary outputs

5. A limited anthropometrical survey to obtain current data appropriate to the present and future mining workforce;
6. Matrix of work/functional work capacity criteria required for optimal worker placement;
7. Development of a comprehensive ergonomic programme to implement best practice;
8. Pilot ergonomics programme in 3 mines and develop criteria to evaluate success;
9. Handbook/s & training CD for ergonomic programmes in different operations; and
10. Technology transfer regional workshops.

Scope

The project should include all recommendations from previous SIMRAC research and similar working populations and should address the restricted tabular height and stope width. The anthropometric study should be conducted to assess the representivity of national data from the SANDF. The matrix of work/functional work capacity must be workshopped with stakeholders to ensure that recommendations are practical and affordable and that representative mines are selected for the pilot, which includes implementing and evaluating the programme. The handbook/s and CD must contain the generic components of best practice programmes and the areas/methods that are necessary for adapting the programme to be mine specific. There must be different but integrated components e.g. guidelines on WMSDs for health personnel, guidelines on operators and machinery for engineers, guidelines on shift rotation for managers.

Motivation

This research will provide detailed information on occupational hazards in the SA mining industry and will assist in setting priorities for further mine-related occupational health research and guidelines. It will help to answer the questions on the numbers of workers exposed to occupational health hazards by mining commodities and by gender. The work is to be based on The National Occupational Health Survey of Mining (NOHSM) conducted by the U.S. National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH).

2. Inventory data identifying all chemical substances and trade name products found on SA mines and the annual usage rate of each chemical substance.
3. Estimates of the potential number of workers exposed to various chemical, physical, biological and ergonomic hazards.
4. Observations on potential occupational exposures at the worksite.
5. Mine services in place to address occupational health hazards.

Handbook – Measurements in Mine Occupational Hygiene

Motivation

It is envisaged that the handbook will represent an authoritative reference manual for occupational health and safety practitioners. Present handbooks in mine environmental control do not encompass the broad aspects of occupational hygiene and also need updating. Extensive legislation pertaining to occupational hygiene has recently been promulgated, which includes an extensive list of airborne pollutants. Occupational hygienists operating on mines are in dire need of guidance in assessing compliance with the occupational hygiene exposure limits. The handbook will give guidance for acquiring the most appropriate instruments and the correct operational procedures necessary for accurate sampling and measurement.

This handbook should be suitable for a broad range of health and safety personnel. It would also be a natural progression and extension to chapters in the occupational health handbook issued by SIMRAC.

Primary outputs

- Overview of current occupational hygiene techniques for assessing the mine environment and worker exposures;
- Analysis of factors that affect employee exposures (eg pump flow rates);
- Development of chapters to address the measurement of chemical, physical (ionising and non-ionising radiation) and biological agents relevant to the mine environment;
- Guidance for the acquiring of the appropriate instrumentation;
- Guidance on the correct operational procedures for sampling and measurement; and
- Guidance on calibration of instrumentation.

Impact of health and safety

High-comprehensive information to assist occupational health practitioners to assess and control exposure of workers to contaminants in the mining industry.

Scope

This project will cover the measurement and assessment of a broad range of chemical, physical and biological agents present in the mining industry. The handbook and CD will also cover control banding and include discussion on measurement range and limits of detection. The project includes publication of 10 000 copies of the handbook.

Estimated duration

24 months

Typical recipients

Occupational health and safety representatives, occupational health practitioners, management and workers.

Potential impact on significant health and safety risks

High potential impact for the identification and controlling of occupational diseases.

Requirement for technology transfer

Handbook to be developed for issue to the mining industry.

Special skills and facilities required by project team

Environmental engineering and occupational hygiene knowledge.
