Environmental Management Plan as Required by Section 11(2) of National Environmental Management Act 1998(Act 107 of 1998)

Revised First Edition

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH
REPUBLIC OF SOUTH AFRICA

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The preparation of the first edition of the EMP as required by section 11(2) of the National Environmental Management Act, Act 107 of 1998 (NEMA) by the Department of Health, which is listed under Schedule 2, has now been completed. The Purpose of the Environmental Management Plan is to give effect to the principle of co-operative governance in order to support the protection of the environment across the country as a whole, as well as monitoring of the achievement, promotion and protection of a sustainable environment by co-ordinating and harmonising environmental policies, plans, programmes and decisions, and preventing unreasonable actions by provinces in order to minimise the duplication of procedures and functions and to promote consistency in the exercise of functions.

Prior to 1994, the Department of Health did not (or if it did, only to a small extent) integrate principles of sustainable development into its strategies for health service delivery. However, this has changed since the promulgation of the National Environmental Management Act, Act 107 of 1998. This Act provides for the establishment of a Committee for Environmental Co-ordination (CEC). The task of this committee is to co-ordinate and foster co-operative governance amongst the role players and to harmonise policies in the area of environmental management.

In accordance with constitutional principles, the National Environmental Management Act further provides the basis for co-operative governance on environmental issues through the preparation of Environmental Implementation Plans and Environmental Management Plans by government departments whose mandate respectively embraces activities which have an impact on the environment or who are responsible for environmental management.

Although the main focus of the Department of Health has been on managing the impact the environment has on the health of the people, it has become apparent that the rendering of health services could have a direct or indirect environmental impact in some circumstances. This Environmental Management Plan describes the mandate and functions of the Department of Health, with regard to environmental management, and outlines how priority actions to ensure compliance can be achieved.

The Environmental Management Plan of the Department of Health clarifies the links between health and sustainable development. Health is considered a key to sustainable development. To be in line with Agenda 21 (an agenda for sustainable development into the 21st century) and the Constitution, the Department's vision needs to include environmental management. The three pillars of sustainable development, economic and social development, and environmental sustainability are therefore integrated into the Department's policies, plans and programmes.

The Environmental Management Plan is a living document, which will be revised and updated every four years. The four-yearly updated version will include the progress made with the implementation of this management plan.

CHAPTER 1: PURPOSE OF ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT PLAN (EMP)

1.1 PURPOSE OF DOH ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT PLAN

This is the First Draft Edition of the Environmental Management Plan (EMP) of the National Department of Health (DOH), as required by Section 11(2) of the National Environmental Management Act, 1998 (Act 107 of 1998), which states that: "Every national Department listed in Schedule 2 as exercising functions involving the management of the environment must prepare an environmental management plan within one year of the promulgation of this Act and at least every four years thereafter". The Department of Health is one of the six national managing departments listed in Schedule 2 of NEMA.

The Purpose of Environmental Management Plan is to give effect to the principle of co-operative governance in order to support the protection of the environment across the country as a whole and to monitor the achievement, promotion and protection of a sustainable environment by coordinating and harmonising environmental policies, plans, programmes and decisions and prevent unreasonable actions being taken by provinces in order to minimise the duplication of procedures and functions and to promote consistency in the exercise of functions.

It is therefore intended that this plan should:

- Establish mechanisms for effective co-operative governance in environmental management with other stakeholders and spheres of government;

- provide more insight into the Department of Health's contribution to sustainable development; and
- provide an entry point for partnership in efficient resource utilisation for sustainable development.

1.2 POLICY AND LEGISLATIVE MANDATE

The information provided in this section will focus mainly on the DOH's role in sustainable development, including generally applicable policies and the laws administered by this Department.

1.2.1 OVER-ARCHING CONTEXT

The Constitution places a major responsibility for the health and welfare of the people of South Africa on the Department of Health (DOH). As part of its fulfilment of this mandate and responsibility, DOH offers to the nation public health services, including preventative, rehabilitative, palliative, promotive and curative health. In line with the requirements of the Constitution and sustainable development, DOH administers some environmental legislation such as the Hazardous Substances Act, No. 15 of 1973, the Tobacco Products Control Act, No. 83 of 1993, the Occupational Diseases in Mines and Workers Act, No. 78 of 1973, and the Health Act, No. 63 of 1973, with which other government departments and stakeholders must comply in order to protect the environment, the health of the people and other life forms. In addition to ensure compliance by other stakeholders with this legislation, the Department also ensures that provincial and local health services comply with such legislation. The National Health Bill, 2003, which will soon be passed in Parliament, will repeal the Health Act of 1977, the Human Tissue Act of 1983, the Human Tissue Amendment Act of 1984 and the Human Tissue Amendment Act of 1989. The Bill provides for the decentralisation of health services to provincial and local tiers of government.

The DOH also has a broader role to play in sustainable development that goes beyond the administering of legislation. There are unsustainable patterns of development and underdevelopment as well as production and consumption processes at both global and local level that are using up the earth's resources and affecting the environment in a way that poses a threat to present and future health conditions. Poor environmental quality has been estimated to contribute 25% of all the preventable ill health on a global scale.

The Department of Health, through its interventions, recognises that the local environmental problems and the ability to manage them are to a large extent influenced by social, political and economic forces at both the local and the international level. As the custodian of the health and wellbeing of the citizens of South Africa and in fulfilling its constitutional and legislative obligations, DOH incorporates considerations regarding sustainable development (at the social, economic and environmental levels) into its policy and legislative development processes and actions.

At the Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro in 1992, the world's leaders recognised the importance of investing in the improvement of people's health and their environment as a pre-requisite for sustainable development. A supportive environment for health is free from major health hazards, satisfies the basic needs of healthy living and facilitates equitable social interaction. Traditional hazards related to development include the lack of access to safe drinking water, inadequate basic sanitation, and indoor air pollution from the burning of fossil fuel for heating and inadequate solid waste disposal. Modern hazards are related to development that lacks health and environmental safeguards, including water pollution from populated areas, industry and intensive agriculture; urban air pollution from cars, coal-fired power stations and industry; and transboundary pollution.

Health is regarded as a key to sustainable development in the first principle of the Rio Declaration on Environment and Development: "Human beings.....are entitled to a healthy and productive life". Agenda 21 (an agenda for sustainable development in the 21st century) devotes an entire chapter (Chapter 6) to "Promoting of Human Health". This chapter recognises the interconnection between health and the environment as well as social and economic development, supports an inter-sectoral approach and identifies five programme areas, which are:

- Meeting primary health care needs;
- Control of communicable diseases;
- Protection of vulnerable groups;
- Meeting urban health challenges, and
- Reducing the risks from environmental pollution and hazards.

Prior to 1994, the provision of health services in South Africa reflected the political and social stratification typical of the government of the day. Like most other services, health was rendered along racial lines, providing varying service standards driven by economic and racial considerations. Health services were more curatively oriented and more advanced in the previously advantaged areas and sectors of the population.

Within health services little consideration was given to linking environmental issues to health and development. Where this did occur it was more reactive than otherwise. There was little input from health services in developments that would have an obvious impact on health and the environment. Furthermore, there were no real programmes that sought to mitigate the negative impacts when they occurred.

The new social dispensation of 1994 heralded a different paradigm and way of thinking. This is evident in the Constitution of South Africa, 1996 (Act 108 of 1996). Section 24 of the Constitution, provides that everyone has the right to an environment that is not harmful to their health or wellbeing; and to have the environment protected for the benefit of present and future generations, through reasonable legislative and other measures that prevent pollution and ecological degradation, promote conservation; and secure ecologically sustainable development. This section plays an important role in integrating people, the environment and legislation by using the wording "not harmful to their health or well-being". The state must ensure an environment that is not harmful to the well-being of its inhabitants. Well-being is a very broad concept and includes more than just everyday needs such as food, water or housing. It includes the workplace and neighbourhood, as well as the experience of an individual when looking at the environment as a whole.

Sections 40 and 41 of the Constitution provide for co-operative governance and section 41 states that all spheres of government must secure the well-being of the people of the country. The Department of Health's endeavour to provide effective health services can enhance sustainable development. The measures required to achieve sustainable economic, social and environmental development are manifold and require co-ordinated intersectoral actions.

1.2.2 POLICY MANDATE

The Department of Health has developed several documents regarding health and health services in the country, such as the White Paper for the Transformation of the Health System in South Africa, 1997, and the Health Sector Strategic Framework, 1999-2004, with the intention of meeting the challenges posed by Agenda 21 (an agenda for sustainable development into the 21st century) and the Constitution.

White Paper for the Transformation of the Health Systems in South Africa (1997)

In meeting the challenges of Agenda 21 in line with the Constitution, the Department of Health, as the custodian of the health of the people, then developed and produced a White Paper for the Transformation of the Health System in South Africa, 1997. This document presents a set of policy objectives and principles upon which the unified national health system of South Africa should be based for efficient delivery of health care in a caring environment. Some of those objectives and goals, as stated under section 1.1.2, are:

- 1) To develop health promotion activities
 - Promote a healthy environment
- 2) To foster community participation across the health sector
 - Encourage communities to take responsibility for their own health promotion and care

Chapter 2, section 2.1.2 (iii), of this document states the following as the role of Environmental Health Directorate:

- Responsible for: developing policies, norms and standards for environmental health, ensuring that basic environmental needs are met and that environmental factors inimical to health are minimised
- Developing an environmental surveillance and evaluation system to monitor the effectiveness of environmental interventions.

The health sector strategies developed are based on the principles of the Reconstruction and Development Programme (RDP), 1994:

- a) The health sector must play its part in promoting equity by developing a single, unified national health system.
- b) The health system will focus on districts as the major focus of implementation, and emphasise the Primary Health Care approach.
- c) The three spheres of government, NGO's and the private sector will unite in the promotion of common goals.
- d) The national, provincial and district levels will play distinct and complementary roles.
- e) An integrated package of essential Primary Health Care Services will be available to the entire population at the first point of contact.

Health Sector Strategic Framework, 1999-2004

The Health Sector Strategic Framework, 1999-2004 focuses on the priorities of the Department for the next five years as follows:

- 1) Decreasing morbidity and mortality rates through strategic interventions.
- 2) Improving quality of care,
- 3) Speeding up delivery of an essential package of services through the district health system,
- 4) Revitalisation of hospital services,
- 5) Improving resource mobilisation and the management of resources without neglecting the attainment of equity in resource allocation.
- 6) Improving human resource management and development.
- 7) Reorganisation of certain support services.
- 8) Legislative reforms,
- 9) Improving communication and consultation within the health system and between the health system and the communities we serve.
- 10) Strengthening co-operation with our partners internationally.

Restructuring the National Health System for Universal Primary Health Care (January 1996)

The document represents a policy statement of the Department of Health and the nine health administrations, on the restructuring of the public and private health sectors, with the aim of developing an equitable and efficient national health system for the country. In terms of the White Paper on Health, the three spheres of government are jointly responsible for the operation of a single National Health System. The principle of co-operative governance that underpins this joint endeavour is spelled out in the Constitution.

Appendix 2 contains Guidelines on the Structure and Functions of the District Health Authority, which give effect to comprehensive Primary Health Care (PHC) activities that encompass all that is required to make a difference to people's lives; to make them healthy. This is a "wellness" approach to health. It recognises that our health is determined by factors that go beyond the traditional definition of health and health care. There are social and other determinants, such as housing, water, sanitation, education, employment, etc.

District Health System

The Department of Health has adopted the Primary Health Care approach to fulfil its constitutional obligations. A Pocket Guide to District Health Care in South Africa (1997) explains the District Health System and the importance of rendering health care within the entity of a health district. It further briefly details the characteristics of a district health system. The country is demarcated into forty-seven (47) districts and six (6) metropolitan areas. These are Category C and A respectively. Within Category C, Municipalities, there are two hundred and thirty one (231) Category B municipalities. Health services will be rendered via these 47 districts and 6 metro poles and will be known as District Health Authorities.

The Department of Health's policies also provide a mandate for environmental management to a lesser extent. These policies mainly provide a mandate for environmental impacts that need to be managed at the provincial level.

1.2.3 LEGISLATIVE MANDATE

National Health Bill, 2003

The Bill will provide a framework for a structured, uniform health system within the Republic of South Africa, taking into account the obligations imposed by the Constitution and other laws on the national, provincial and local governments with regard to health services. Section 20(2)(b), (g) and (j) give the environmental management functions of the Department; section 88 provides for environmental health investigations; section 95(1)(c) and (m) provides for regulations regarding prescriptions in terms of the Bill (e.g. health nuisances and medical waste).

Health Act (Act 63 of 1977)

The objective of this Act is to provide measures for the promotion of the health of inhabitants of the country. Section 14(1)(c) of the Act provides, inter alia, that a function of the Department of Health is to take steps for the promotion of a safe and healthy environment. Large parts of this Act have been assigned to the provinces. Section 84 of the Local Government Municipal Structures Act, 2000, stipulates the functions and powers regarding district and local municipalities as follows:

- Bulk water supply
- Bulk sewage purification works and main sewage disposal
- Solid waste disposal sites

The prevention and control of the conditions as listed in the Health Act, 1977, the Health Amendment Act, 1983, and the Health Amendment Act, 1984, through policy and legislative process provide, to some extent, a mandate for environmental management for the National and Provincial Departments of Health (under section 16(1) of the Act), and for Local authorities under section 20(1) of the Act.

The Health Act, 1977(HA), aims to ensure that while the public is provided with services, care and caution should also be exercised that, the health of environment will not be compromised in the process, and that developments should be health conscious and environmentally sensitive in order to be sustainable.

Chapter 5 of the Health Act (excluding sections 41 and 44) empowers the Minister to make regulations on a number of matters that affect the environment. These include matters relating to:

- Conditions dangerous to health
- rubbish, night-soil, sewage, or other waste and reclaimed products;
- water intended for human use and food processing;

- nuisances.

There are several other sets of regulations promulgated under the HA, which are administered by the Department of Health, that are pertinent to ensuring that the health of the people and the environment is well protected. Those regulations that include an element of environmental management are the following:

- Regulations governing general hygiene requirements for food premises and the transportation of food,
- The draft drinking water treatment chemicals regulations,
- The draft hairdressing/beauty and cosmetology services industry regulations,
- The draft regulations for the control of environmental conditions constituting a danger to health or nuisance.

The Health Act is going to be repealed by the National Health Bill when it is passed, whereby the decentralisation of health services to provincial and local tiers of government will be effected, which includes environmental pollution control, waste management and water quality monitoring.

Hazardous Substances Act (Act 15 of 1973)

The Hazardous Substances Act, 1973(HSA) aims to ensure that various classes of chemical substances are imported, manufactured, packed, stored, handled, transported and disposed of without posing a threat and causing harm to life and the environment. The HSA makes provision for the promulgation of regulations governing groups of hazardous substances and the delegation of duties by the Minister to competent authorities and other entities deemed fit.

Hazardous substances are classified according to their toxicity, corrosiveness and flammability. An annual permitting procedure has been developed to minimise the use of highly toxic hazardous substances. This function is co-ordinated by the Directorate of Environmental Health of the DOH with the assistance of the provincial and local authorities.

To this end the suitability of applicants to be licensed to have access to such products is critical. Their premises, storage facilities and understanding of the product are enquired into prior to permission being granted. They are then advised as to what measures to take to ensure the safety and health of people and the environment.

Hazardous substances are broadly categorised into pesticides and toxic chemical substances used for research and industrial purposes and as detergents. It is critical that the active ingredient in any substance should be evaluated.

Several sets of regulations administered by the Department of Health have been developed and implemented under this Act. These regulations have been developed with the aim of protecting life and the environment. The implementation and enforcement of these regulations is performed at the provincial and local levels of government, with technical support from the national Department. Some of the regulations that have environmental implications are:

- Regulations relating to the control over fluoroacetic acid (mono), its salts and derivatives
- Regulations relating to the control of the sale of cyanide for use in a cyanide poison-firing apparatus
- Group 1 hazardous substance regulations.

International Health Regulations Act, 1974 (Act 28 of 1974)

The International Health Regulations Act, 1974 (IHRA) aims to prevent the spread of international diseases with the minimum interference to world trade. These regulations are compared with the international code of practice for health sectors all over the world, in particular those of member states of the World Health Organisation (WHO). All member states are to observe them and apply them without fail. Where a member state alters their regulations the fact has to be communicated to all other member states for appropriate action, particularly regarding entry into the country.

The regulations set guidelines and make recommendations regarding certain communicable diseases due to the ease with which they spread. These diseases include cholera, yellow fever, plague and malaria. There are also entry requirements that are internationally agreed and applied as a general rule between member states of World Health Organisation.

The IHRA, 1974, makes provision for the proper management of waste generated from conveyances, particularly ships and aeroplanes.

Part iii, Article 14 reads:

"Every port and airport shall also be provided with an effective system for the removal and safe disposal of excrement, waste water, condemned food and other matter dangerous to health."

Through the Act, the Department of Health monitors the importation of hazardous substances and other commodities that might trigger communicable diseases. It also ensures that waste from sea and air traffic is managed in such a way that it does not affect the environment and human life negatively.

Tobacco Products Control Act, 1993 (Act 83 of 1993)

The purpose of the Tobacco Products Control Act and its Amendment are to prohibit or restrict smoking in public places and to regulate the sale and advertisement of tobacco products in certain respects. The Act is enforced by the local authorities in their area of jurisdiction and certain amendments have been made to it.

Medicines and Related Substances Control Amendment Act, 1997 (Act 90 of 1997)

This Act has a provision for the control of medicines and "scheduled" substances with regard to good manufacturing practices to combat environmental and associated health hazards. The Act also provides for the environmentally sound disposal or destruction of 'scheduled' substances that have become unfit for use through the regulations promulgated thereunder.

The Department of Health also administers other legislation that has impact on the environment. These Acts seek to ensure that the commodities they regulate are managed in such a way that they do not cause harm to life or threat to environmental integrity. This legislation is outlined below:

Foodstuff, Cosmetics and Disinfectant Act, 1972 (Act 72 of 1972)

This Act is under review. The Act seeks to ensure that food, cosmetics and disinfectants are managed in such a way that they do not cause harm to life and the environment.

Human Tissue Act, 1983 (Act 65 of 1983)

Chapter 1, section 10 and Chapter 3, section 26, refer to disposal of the bodies of deceased persons as well as the blood and related substances. It is important that these substances are handled properly to ensure the integrity of the environment and the health of people. The National Health Bill will shortly repeal this Act when the former is passed.

1.3 VISION, MISSION (HEALTH SECTOR STRATEGIC FRAMEWORK, 1999-2004) AND PRIORITY AREAS

1.3.1 VISION

"A caring and humane society in which all South Africans have access to affordable, good quality health care"

The vision of the Department of Health as stated in the Health Sector Strategic Framework, 1999-2004, does not clearly promote Health's role in environmental management and sustainable development. This is an identified omission that will be addressed in the vision of the Department of Health.

1.3.2 MISSION

"To improve access to health care for all, reduce inequity, and focus on working in partnership with other stakeholders to improve the quality of care of all levels of the health system, especially preventive and promotive health, and to improve the overall efficiency of the health care delivery system".

The mission of the Department of Health says nothing about promoting DOH's role in environmental management and sustainable development. This mission needs to be revised to include environmental management considerations.

1.3.3 PRIORITY AREAS

The Health Sector Strategic Framework, 1999-2004, focuses on the ten priority areas of the Department for the next five years, as follows:

- 1) Decreasing morbidity and mortality rates through strategic interventions
- 3) Improving the quality of care
- 3) Speeding up the delivery of an essential package of services through the district health system
- 4) Revitalisation of hospital services
- 5) Improving resource mobilisation and the management of resources without neglecting the attainment of equity in resource allocation
- 6) Improving human resource management and development
- 7) Reorganisation of certain support services
- 8) Legislative reforms
- 9) Improving communication and consultation within the health system and between the health system and the communities we serve

10) Strengthening co-operation with our partners internationally.

1.4 STRUCTURE OF THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

The Department of Health has been able to fulfil its mandate and functions and to pursue its mission through its clusters (chief directorates). The Department of Health consists of several clusters, each including several directorates. The core functions of the Department of Health are organised into two main cluster groupings (see the departmental organogram of 2002), both of which have environmental management functions.

1.5 ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT FUNCTIONS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

Environmental pollution that has a negative impact on health has reached disastrous proportions in recent years. This resulted in the placement of the Environment and Health on the international political agenda so that the problem can be addressed on a global scale. Environmental protection therefore cannot be divorced from health, hence some aspects of the Department of Health's functions involve environmental management. The environmental management functions of the DOH that satisfy the principles and requirements of NEMA and Agenda 21 are outlined below. The Department of Health has a major responsibility towards the health and welfare of the people of South Africa. The key environmental management functions of the Department of Health are spread amongst several Directorates within different Clusters as summarised in Table 1 below.

In most instances provincial and local tiers of government are responsible for the enforcement, inspection and monitoring of compliance with the Department of Health's environmental policies, legislation, norms and standards, as well as regulations aimed at organisations, industries, private and public enterprises and to the public. The DOH's environmental management functions fall mainly in the area of chemical and, waste pollution management.

Table 1: Summary of environmental management functions and mandate of the Department of Health

Focus area	Role	Partner(s)	Comment(s)/Gap(s)
Hazardous Chemicals Management	- Promote environmentally sound management of chemicals through their entire life-cycle, - Monitor and control the use of grouped hazardous chemicals. - Issue permits for importation and use, and licence to carry on a business as supplier of Group 1 substances. - Collect and manage data on human poisonings resulting from pesticides.	- Department of Transport - Department of Water Affairs and Forestry - Department of Environmental Affairs and Tourism - Department of Agriculture - Department of Labour - Department of Trade and Industry	- Lack of proper co-ordination mechanism or structure, such as National Chemicals Safety Forum. - Roles and responsibilities between key role players not clearly delineated. The forum needs to be formed by the different role players, with DOH taking the lead role and terms of reference should be formulated.
Prevention of Pollution and Waste Management	- Ensure a sustainable, safe and healthy environment. - Promote environmentally sound and safe management of health care waste. - Promote pollution prevention and waste minimisation.	- Department of Environmental Affairs and Tourism - Department of Water Affairs and Forestry	- Lack of clarity with respect to sludge management. This should be discussed with the different role players. - Roles and responsibilities in air quality management not clarified. - Needs assessment for a forum in air quality management should be done by DOH.
Port Health Services	Provide Port Health Services at all ports of entry.	- Department of Safety and Security - South African Revenue Services - Customs and Excise - Department of Agriculture - Department of Home Affairs

Potentially negative environmental impacts of DOH services

The operational sections (Toxicology, Blood Alcohol, Food and Pesticides) of the Forensic Chemistry Laboratory, the work of the National Health Laboratory Services and Emergency Medical Services, including Primary Health Care Services Provision, generate hazardous chemical waste, pharmaceutical waste, infectious waste and radioactive waste on a daily basis. If sound management practices of the waste generated are not followed these will result in a serious environmental impact.

The Department of Health has both environmentally impacting functions arising from health care service provision and managing functions. The focus of this first edition of Environmental Management Plan (EMP) is on the environmental management functions of the Department of Health. However, the Department can consider addressing the environmentally impacting functions as one of its EMP commitments, in which case it would be necessary to include Environmental Impact Management Plan (EIMP) in the second edition of its plan.

1.7 SPECIFIC FUNCTIONS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

The health care service that the Department of Health (DOH) offers to the nation involves public health care, and this includes preventive, palliative, rehabilitative, promotive and curative health. Health care services refer to the services rendered by private practices, public institutions and individuals. Table 2 depicts the general core functions of the DOH, indicating both environmental management and impacting functions.

Table 2: Clusters within the DOH and their general functions, including those having environmental management and environmentally impacting considerations

CHAPTER 2: INSTITUTIONAL ARRANGEMENTS AND CO-OPERATIVE GOVERNANCE

This section will be looking at institutional arrangements for co-operative governance regarding both environmentally impacting and management functions.

2.1 INSTITUTIONAL RELATIONSHIPS WITH INTERNATIONAL STRUCTURES

The Department of Health is a member of the International Programme of Chemical Safety (IPCS). The overall objectives of the IPCS are to establish the scientific basis for assessing risks to human health and the environment from exposure to chemicals, through an international peer review process, as a prerequisite for the promotion of chemical safety, and to provide technical assistance in strengthening national capacities for the sound management of chemicals. The IPCS works closely with the International Organisation for the Management of Chemicals (IOMC) and OECD on aspects relating to data and information about chemicals. The United States Environmental Protection Agency (US-EPA) is another organisation that provides recent reliable toxicity data that is of the utmost important during the decision-making process.

South Africa is represented in the International Union of Toxicology (IUTOX) through its Toxicology Society, at whose meeting pertinent issues of global concern on toxicity of chemicals are discussed. The Department of Health forms part of the representation in that structure.

South Africa co-ordinates the Health Sector of the Southern African Development Community (SADC) and has ratified the SADC Protocol on Health Co-operation. An implementation strategy for the protocol is being finalised, taking into account the re-organisation of the SADC. Among the priority areas for coöperation is HIV/AIDS for which a regional strategy has been developed.

2.2 INSTITUTIONAL RELATIONSHIP WITH PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT AND ARRANGEMENTS WITH LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Schedule 4 (Part A and B) of the Constitution stipulates the Functional Areas of Concurrent National and Provincial Legislative Competence. Section 125(2)(b) stipulates that a provincial executive is responsible for implementing all national legislation which falls in an area listed in Schedule 4 unless the Constitution or an Act of Parliament provides otherwise. Section 125(3) limits this responsibility to the extent that the province has the administrative capacity to assume effective responsibility and places an obligation on national government to develop the administrative capacity of provinces.

Section 156(6)(a) and (7) limit the legislative competence of a province over local government matters to-

- Providing for the monitoring and support of local government in the province (section 155(6)(a)); and
- Seeing to the effective performance by municipalities of their functions in respect of the matters listed in Schedules 4 and 5, by regulating the exercise by municipalities of their executive authority (section 155(7)).

In terms of the White Paper on Health, the three spheres of government are jointly responsible for the operation of a single National Health System. The principle of co-operative governance that underpins this joint endeavour is spelt out in the Constitution.

The Health Promotion, Environmental and Occupational Health divisions within the Department of Health in all of the nine (9) provinces in all three tiers of government have formal communication structures and perform functions related to the mandate of the Department of Health. The National Department develops national legislation, policies, guidelines, norms and standards with regard to health and provides support to provincial and local tiers of government to ensure that all the people of this country have access to basic health services of good quality and that this access improves over time. The Department of Health shares with other departments the responsibility to protect and promote health.

The functions related to the mandate of the Department of Health are executed at Provincial and District Municipalities and Metros. There are 284 Municipalities in all, within 47 District Municipalities and 6 Metropolitan Municipalities. There is one (1) inter-provincial meeting and a cluster conference biannually for the cluster Non-Personal Health Services. The objectives of this meeting are to align provincial operational plans with national strategic issues and priorities and also to ascertain and promote synergy between Health Promotion, Environmental and Occupational Health.

The Health Care Service is organised within the three (3) spheres of government. Various levels of services are rendered in each of these spheres. The National DOH supports the provinces, develops national laws and policies in consultation with the provinces and other stakeholders, assists in the interpretation of policies and in capacity building, and renders tertiary health care services. Provinces support and assist in building capacity in health districts and render secondary health care services. There are clear lines of referral from one level to the next. Environmental considerations are placed and exercised at the local level of structures that are involved with environmental health impact assessment (EHIA), which is carried out for new projects and developments. There are also private organisations rendering health care services within districts and in provinces. The Department of Health further co-ordinates its commitment to the citizens of South Africa through MINMEC meetings, where the Minister chairs the meetings, and through the Provincial Health Restructuring Committee (PHRC), where the Director-General of the Department presides.

2.3 STRUCTURES FOR INTERACTION WITH OTHER NATIONAL DEPARTMENTS AND OTHER STAKEHOLDERS

The Department of Health does not lead any key cooperative governance structure aimed at co-operative governance with respect to its environmental management functions except for Port Health Services, which is governed by the InterPort Co-ordinating Committee. Instead, the Department liaises with various stakeholders within and outside of government through structures led by other departments or specific organisations. This could constitute a gap that was created in the past by not clearly recognising the Department's environmental management functions and the key role it has to play in sustainable development. This will be clarified and clearly spelt out in the second edition of the EMP.

The activities and developments that impact on community/public health do not primarily fall within the health sector but in others, thus the input of the department is crucial in ensuring that these developments are health promoting or sustainable. The document will highlight areas of importance and the linkages with various stakeholders in those areas, as shown in Table 3. This highlights the Department of Health's commitment towards ensuring that international standards and guidelines are complied with, and that responsibilities towards international protocols are performed.

2.4 MECHANISMS TO FACILITATE CO-OPERATIVE GOVERNANCE

There are various co-operative mechanisms through which ties are maintained. The following are some of the mechanisms available to facilitate co-operative governance:

- Committee for Environmental Co-ordination for a Sustainable Environment
- National Sanitation Task Team
- Environmentally Sound Low Cost Housing for Accommodation and Recreational Areas
- National Inter-departmental Structure for Port Health Services
- Northern Aquaculture Working Group for Protecting Humans Against Manipulated /Modified Food
- Interdepartmental Advisory Committee Protecting Humans Against Poisoning
- National Committee on Climate Change for Atmospheric Pollution Prevention
- Environmental Capacity Building Project Committee for Capacity Building and Education in all Aspect of the Environment
- Aquatox Forum for Effluent Toxicity and Discharge Permitting;
- Interdepartmental Committee on the Management of Chemicals and Hazardous Waste for Sound Management of Chemicals and Waste.

The Department of Health participates in these committees either nationally or through the provinces. The committees usually meet biannually to discuss issues of concern. The interaction assists the Department of Health in planning and developing its policies and in prioritising issues of environmental concern that affect public health in line with the policies of other role players. The interaction also assists the Department of Health in the process of legislative review so as to harmonise its legislation and actions or programmes relating to the environment.

2.5 CO-OPERATION WITH OTHER KEY STAKEHOLDERS AND INTERESTED PARTIES

The Department of Health has a good working relationship with organisations and industries. This is in line with government policy on fostering and enhancing Private and Public Partnership (PPP). This partnership has proved to be most effective in achieving the mandates of the Department of Health. The Department played a role in the adoption of the notion "Duty of Responsible Care" by the chemicals manufacturing industries. This has resulted in the sound management of production by-products and the resulting waste, and also takes care of the health and safety of workers.

A strong relationship has been established between the Department and Non-Governmental Organisations looking after the environmental concerns of the public and civil society. The existing relationships promote and create a healthy environment for consultation during the policy formulation process.

The Department of Health has fostered a good working relationship with organisations such as the Crop Protection and Animal Health Association (AVCASA) and the Poison Working Group (PWG) for Health and Safety in the use of agro-chemicals and other remedies for the control of problem animals.

CHAPTER 3: ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT PLAN

For each environmental management function of the Department the following information is provided:

- Description of environmental management function
- Description of specific environmental law, norms and guidelines applied by this function
- Description of extent of compliance
- Constraints or limitations with respect to ensuring compliance

3.1 HAZARDOUS CHEMICALS MANAGEMENT

3.1.1 Description of Environmental Management Functions

- Promote environmentally sound management of chemicals through the entire life-cycle
- Monitor and control the use of grouped hazardous chemicals
- Issue permits for the importation and use of hazardous chemicals, and licences to carry on a business as a supplier of Group 1 substances
- Collect and manage data on human poisonings resulting from pesticides

3.1.2 Description of specific Environmental Laws, Norms and Guidelines

Hazardous Substances Act, (Act 15 of 1973)

The Act states that various classes of chemical substances shall be imported, manufactured, packed, stored, used, handled and disposed of without causing harm to life and the environment. For any person and/or organisation to perform the above, the Minister of Health has to issue a permit.

Provision is made that expired and disused chemical substances, including empty containers, should be returned to manufacturers or dealers for safe and sound disposal.

Section 29 allows the Minister to make regulations with regard to:

- Authorising, regulating, controlling, restricting or prohibiting the manufacture, modification, importation, storage, dumping and other disposal of any grouped hazardous substance or class of grouped hazardous substances.

Environmental Authorisation

The Department of Health issues licences to individuals, groups and organisations to carry on a business as suppliers of group 1B hazardous substances.

3.1.3 Description of Extent of Compliance

The Department of Health in all three spheres of government in conjunction with all role players, conducts risk management through frequent inspection visits to licensed premises. It is the prerogative of the Department to determine the frequency of inspection visits, depending largely on the type of chemical(s) involved. Licences issued are reviewed annually for compliance checking and renewal.

3.1.4 Constraints and limitations with respect to ensuring compliance

Table 5: Constraints with respect to compliance and recommendations

Constraints and Limitations	Actions to address constraints
Legislation itself poses a major limitation	• It does not yet clearly state which sphere of government should enforce certain provisions or sections of the Act. The Act will be revised to address this and other similar issues.
Enforcement by local authority official(s)	• Dangerous Goods inspectors to be provided with a means of identification to produce during inspection visits.
Co-ordination and responsibilities	• Establishment of the National Chemicals Safety Forum, a multi-stakeholder forum co-ordinating health, environment and safety issues. • Department of Health will develop a National Policy on Chemicals Management.

3.2 POLLUTION PREVENTION AND WASTE MANAGEMENT

3.2.1 Description of Environmental Management Functions

- To ensure a sustainable safe and healthy environment
- To promote environmentally sound and safe management of health care waste
- To promote pollution prevention and waste minimisation

3.2.2 Description of specific environmental law, norms and guidelines

National Health Bill, 2003

As already mentioned in section 1.2.3 of this document, the Bill is intended to provide a comprehensive legislative framework that was previously provided by a number of Acts administered by the Department.

Health Act (Act 63 of 1977)

This Act ensures that waste and other by-products wherever they are generated, are properly taken care of so as not to harm the public and the environment. The Act makes provision for the Minister to promulgate regulations in respect of environmental conditions that may constitute a danger to health or a nuisance, such as wastewater and sewage, refuse or solid waste.

Section 37(c) allows the Minister to make regulations with respect to any thing that is added to drinking water for the purpose of treatment or purification.

Medicines and Related Substances Control Amendment Act, 1997 (Act 90 of 1997)

This Act provides for the control of medicines and "scheduled" substances with regard to Good Manufacturing Practices in order to combat environmental and associated health hazards. The Act also provides for the environmentally sound disposal or destruction of “scheduled” substances which have become unfit for use, through the promulgation of regulations thereunder.

Human Tissue Act, 1983(Act 65 of 1983)

Chapter 1, section 10, and Chapter 3, section 26, refer to the disposal of bodies of the deceased destitute as well as blood and related substances. It is important that these matters are properly dealt with to ensure the integrity of the environment and the health of people.

3.2.3 Description of the extent of compliance

Environmental Health Practitioners (EHPs), being in the employ of the Department of Health, are authorised to implement the Act and to enforce the regulations framed thereunder, whether developed by national, provincial or local government.

Table 6: Extent of compliance with legislation

POLICY AND LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS	EXTENT OF COMPLIANCE
Health Act, (Act 63 of 1977)
Regulation of environmental conditions that may constitute a danger to health or a nuisance,	• Regulations for the control of environmental conditions constituting a danger to health and the environment developed.

Prohibit pollution in terms of wastewater and sewage, refuse or solid waste.	There is currently no specific regulation to enforce this provision except the Nuisance regulation.
Health Act, (Act 63 of 1977)
Prohibit pollution in terms of wastewater and sewage, refuse or solid waste.	The Department has developed, in collaboration with other role players, effluent and sludge guides. Effluent dischargers and sludge producers have to comply with the requirements specified in those guides. Local authorities monitor compliance.
Section 37(c)	There is presently no system in place to monitor compliance. This omission will be addressed through the introduction of a legally binding scheme to regulate treatment chemicals.
Medicines and Related Substances Control Amendment Act, 1997 (Act 90 of 1997)
Safe and environmentally sound disposal or destruction of scheduled substances.	In the past pharmaceutical wastes were divorced from infectious waste, hence this area was neglected.

Human Tissue Act, 1983(Ad 65 of 1983)
Sections 10 and 26	Parties must obtain permission from their respective local authorities prior to performing such an exercise. Officials from the local authorities enforce and monitor compliance in their areas of jurisdiction.
Choice of Termination of Pregnancy Act, 1996 (Act 92 of 1996)
Section 2	Information gathering systems are fully functional. Compliance with waste management principles will be monitored through Nuisance regulations.

3.2.4 Constraints and limitations with respect to compliance

Table 7: Constraints with respect to compliance and recommendations

Constraints and limitations	Action to address constraints
Lack of National Health Care Waste Management strategy	Process is on-going towards the formulation of a Policy guide on Health Care Waste Management
There is at present a lack of experienced staff with appropriate skills to integrate Waste Management, Health issues and sustainable development within the DOH	Staff competent to deal with environmental and sustainable development issues will be developed within the Environmental Health Unit.
Devolution of Environmental Health Services to Municipalities	Finalise the devolution process with clear roles and responsibilities.

3.3 PORT HEALTH SERVICES

3.3.1 Description of Environmental Management Functions

- To provide Port Health Services at all ports of entry

3.3.2 Description of specific environmental laws, norms and guidelines

International Health Regulation Act, (Act 28 of 1974)

The IHRA (1974) makes provision for the proper management of waste generated from conveyances, particularly ships and aeroplanes.

(Part iii, Section 14)

"Every port and airport shall also be provided with an effective system for the removal and safe disposal of excrement, waste water, condemned food and other matter dangerous to health."

3.3.3 Description of the extent of compliance

Through the Act, The Department of Health, with the assistance of other key role players, monitors the importation of hazardous substances and other commodities that might trigger communicable diseases. It also ensures that waste from sea and air traffic is managed in such a way that it does not have a negative impact on the environment and human health.

Table 8: Extent of compliance with legislation

Policy and legislative provision	Extent of compliance
International Health Regulation Act, (Act 28 of 1974)
To control and monitor the movement of hazardous substances, foodstuffs, cosmetics, disinfectants and medicines entering the country	Port Health officers have been appointed in all ports of entry. Compliance is monitored with the assistance of Customs and Excise officials.

3.3.4 Constraints and limitations with respect to ensuring compliance

Table 9: Constraints with respect to compliance and recommendations

Constraints and Limitations	Actions to address these
Legislation is the major gap	The World Health Organisation is at present reviewing the Act in consultation with member states.

CHAPTER 4: COMMITMENTS AND PLAN OF ACTION FOR ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT

The main focus of several directorates within the Department of Health has been to manage the impact the environment has on the health of the people. The rendering of certain health services could nevertheless result in direct or indirect environmental impacts. Therefore, in the light of the above, the Department of Health is now faced with the challenge of undertaking actions that are necessary to address this state of affairs. Table 3 depicts the priority actions to be undertaken by the Department to satisfy the requirements of Agenda 21 and the NEMA principles:
