The issue of new entrants is a fishery specific one and is dealt with in the fishery specific policies. A distinction is drawn, in the Fishery specific policies, between "additional" entrants and "new entrants". In order to permit the participation of additional entrants the number of participants in a sector will have to be increased from the existing number. In general, there is very little room to accommodate additional entrants because most of the fisheries are already over-subscribed. However, new entrants may be accommodated through the replacement of unsuccessful right holder applicants. This will be done if current right holders have failed to transform meaningfully, or if current right holders have failed to perform or invest adequately, or if the current effort within a specific fishery is considered to be less than optimal. In some sectors, in order to consolidate the right holders in a sector, the number of participants will be reduced by not granting rights to low scoring existing right holders, and not replacing them with new entrants.

As a general rule, the Department will not allow right holders who sold or in any way alienated a fishing right to re-enter that commercial fishery. The same applies to shareholders or members of close corporations who sold a significant share of the right holder.

7.7 Performance

The performance of existing right holders may be assessed in the manner described below.

(a) Financial performance

Financial performance of the applicant may be assessed in terms of a set of financial ratios which lend themselves to benchmarking backed up by audited financial statements. The financial statements may also be used to determine who the real beneficiaries of the allocation are ("follow-the-buck" principle) and to determine whether the right holder has invested in the industry.

(b) Payment of levies

Applicants be required to provide proof that they are up to date on the payment of their levies on fish landed during the medium term right period. If levy payments have been outstanding for a period in excess of 60 days, the applicant may be penalised. Should the applicant nevertheless succeed in being granted a right, the Department will not issue a permit until the full amount outstanding is paid.

(c) Compliance

Applicants convicted for serious infringements of the MLRA, the Regulations, permit conditions and other fishing related offences, during the medium term right period, may be excluded. Minor infringements, including the payment of admission of guilt fines, may be taken into account as a balancing criterion.

Vessels listed on the negative lists of any Regional Fisheries Management Organisation ("RFMO") will not be allowed to harvest fish stocks. Applicants who own (wholly or in part) or nominate vessels that are negatively listed will be rejected.

The Department's records relating to infringements of the MLRA will be made available for inspection prior to the allocation process.

(d) Fishing performance

The fishing performance of medium term right holders may be examined to determine whether an existing right holder applicant has effectively harvested a medium-term allocation. Applicants that did not harvest any fish during a fishing season or who have not collected a permit for an entire season may be excluded. Undercatching and overcatching may be used as balancing criteria in certain sectors.

The Department's records relating to catch returns will be made available for inspection prior to the allocation of rights, if they are to be used in the allocation process.

7.8 Investment

Investment in a vessel nominated to harvest the resource and other fixed assets will be recognised as long as that investment demonstrates a genuine intention to share the risk of participating in the sector. Shareholding in vessels obtained at minimum or no cost to the applicant, will not be recognised as investment. The level of investment will be assessed with reference to the quantum held during the medium term rights allocation process.

7.9 Paper Quotas

The delegated authority must endeavour to prevent paper quota applicants from entering the industry and to remove paper quotas that currently hold rights. Paper quotas undermine or circumvent the objectives of the rights allocation process.

(a) New entrants

In the long-term rights allocation process, the delegated authority will exclude new entrant applicants who appear to be paper quota risks. For this purpose, the delegated authority will consider an applicant to be a "paper quota risk" if that applicant appears to have no serious intention to share the risk of fully participating in the sector, especially if a danger exists that an applicant has not applied in order to enter the industry but to gain some financial benefit without direct involvement in the main activities associated with exploiting any right that may be granted. In determining whether a new entrant applicant poses such a paper quota risk, the applicant's assets and access to capital and its financial and business planning and commitments should be considered.

The delegated authorities will also exclude as "paper quota risk" applicants considered to be "fronts" for other beneficiaries. Fronting occurs when, in order to circumvent a policy objective, an application is made through another entity. An example is an application made by an ostensibly transformed entity with the intention that the main benefits will flow to an untransformed entity or individuals that are not black persons.

(b) Medium term holders

Delegated authorities will also exclude medium-term right holders who are paper quotas. For this purpose, the delegated authorities will consider as paper quotas, medium-term right holders with weak or non-existent performance records combined with no investment or involvement.

Delegated authorities will also exclude "fronts" and will for this purpose employ the "follow the buck" principle to determine whether a policy objective has been circumvented. For example, delegated authorities will seek to determine whether ostensibly transformed right holders have in fact granted any financial or other benefit to black shareholders or members. This kind of front will not be re-allocated rights.

As a general rule, delegated authorities will not allow right holders who have sold or in any way alienated a fishing right to re-enter that commercial fishery under a different guise.

(c) Clusters C and D

In Cluster C and D sectors, large groups of identical or very similar applications sponsored by third parties, will be excluded as paper quota fronts. In general, no more than one right will be allocated per household. In these sectors, applicants will be required to disclose their relationship to other applicants in the sector. If more than one member of a household applies for a right, all the applications from that household may be excluded, unless the applicants clearly and convincingly demonstrate that they have established separate small commercial operations.
